The paperless revolution just means you have to have electronic copies of all your papers. In triplicate. Backed up on 3 separate servers and disk. Ans copies cc'd to all the correct departments. Have fun, I'm going outside to frolic and stuff. evil grin

I'm bailing at 2 to go ice skating. This should be funny, since I haven't done this since I was, um, twelve?

Ice... skating?

Like, skating on ice?

In boots with skinny metal strips on the bottom! It's, like, the weirdest idea since anything!

T. is bummed 'cause her favorite, Pershing Park, is closed for reno. So it'll be either Fort Dupont or Pentagon Row.

Do you skate?

What do you think would happen if I put runners on the Holstein?

That would be kind of neat. You could stand, or belly-flop it. And if you had the runners on a standard truck, so it would steer...

T. invites you both to come along. She says with four of us, we can body-check the annoying children. And she says it had better be Pentagon Row, because the food is better around there. She also says they have size 13 men's skates for rent. g

Would we be busting up your date?

My feet are legend! Bwahahahahaha! I have extra socks in my go bag, even, so I can pad them out.

If I skin my nose, though, you're explaining it to Dad.

Fourth wheel, StatisticalDude. g And if you weren't welcome, I wouldn't have asked T., and she wouldn't have said yes.

Not that there aren't things I'm not inviting you to... o.O (Stop that train of thought right there. You can't skate in your bunk.)

You can still borrow my beanie. g

(Blues euphemism alert!)

(There's actually a story that goes with the beanie. Involving somebody who shall remain nameless peeling off a wall while lead climbing, out West, and anyway, I'm just lucky it wasn't a t-shirt that said "My sorry ass nearly got my climbing partner killed, and all I got was this lousy t-shirt.")

O.O

Eeepsies.

I think one is expected to make some small noise at moments like that, to acknowledge the potential for unpleasant consequences. (Yes, I've been reading the wry entries in the climbing dictionary. g)

But, awww! I didn't realize it was a present! With deep sentimental significance!
